Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. All sources are connected read-only: the agent reads your databases, it never writes a line to them. The worst incident possible on its side is a wrong figure, never damaged data — and a wrong figure shows, because it arrives with its source.

The seven sources

Source	What is read from it	Freshness	What it makes answerable
ERP — sales	Orders, lines, deliveries, credit notes	Hourly	Activity, basket, service level
ERP — purchasing and stock	Purchase prices, stock-outs, supplier lead times	Hourly	Margin and product availability
CRM	Accounts, contacts, deals, portfolios	Twice a day	Sales coverage

Source	What is read from it	Freshness	What it makes answerable
Data warehouse	3 years of consolidated history, 411,000 lines	Overnight	Trends and comparisons
Price lists in a spreadsheet	14 grids	On each upload	Gap between list price and invoiced price
General ledger	Income and expense accounts	Monthly	Management / accounting reconciliation
Customer reference data	Families, sectors, outstanding balances	Overnight	Segmentation

What is not connected — scope set by the company

Source left out	Accepted consequence
Payroll	No question about pay finds an answer, whoever asks it
Personnel files	No individual performance indicator can be produced
Mailboxes	No analysis of internal correspondence

Removing a source takes a minute and breaks nothing. The indicators that depended on it then display as unavailable, never as approximate: a partial figure presented as complete is more dangerous than an empty cell.

What read-only rules out, technically

Action	Possible?
Correct an order, a price, a credit note	No
Close or reopen a period	No
Create or amend a customer record	No
