Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. The items are gathered from three distinct sources — website CMS, editorial drive, product catalogue — and reconciled against each other. Nothing is copied: the agent reads where the content lives.

What was gathered for the October issue

Source	Items	What it brings	What was missing without it
Website CMS	17	Articles, news, updated advice pages	—
Product catalogue	6	Launches with image and technical sheet	The real availability dates
Editorial drive	2	Written customer stories	The Vaulnay story, never published anywhere

Source	Items	What it brings	What was missing without it
Total candidates	25	All dated and sourced	—

What was set aside before presentation, and why

Set aside	Number	Reason	Outcome
Duplicates across sources	4	Same item published on the site and as catalogue news	One copy kept
Updates with no change of substance	2	Wording only	Not proposed
Unavailable launch	1	Availability moved to 15 November	Held for the next issue, not dropped

The reserve: 14 published items, never circulated, still current

Family	Items	Age	Why they hold
Layout guides	4	4 to 11 months	Undated subject, figures still accurate
Customer stories	6	3 to 14 months	The section that takes 41 % of clicks
Standards and compliance pages	4	5 to 9 months	Dated updates, reusable

The reserve is not meant to replace the period's news. It is released whenever a period has fewer than six candidates — precisely the months in which, historically, Alveor's issue did not go out. Two issues' worth is available today.

> No content is created to pad an issue. The agent composes from what exists and what the company has published or approved. Producing the content itself is the job of
