Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. The firm, its clients, its documents and its figures were invented; they illustrate a situation common in management consultancy and describe no real client. This log is an access record, not a measure of a person. No individual productivity counter is produced, and the reason is mechanical: such a counter would become a target, and would then stop saying anything about the holdings.

The two acts of a departure, which are distinct

Act	Timing	Who triggers it	Effect
Withdrawal of permission	Immediate	Methods team	The 19 files leave the scope; a question asked the next day retrieves no passage from them

Act	Timing	Who triggers it	Effect
Preservation of the methodologies authored	On sign-off	Methods team	The 3 methods written belong to the firm and stay in the handbook

What the log carries, and what it is for

Data	Intended use	Excluded use
File opened, document, date and time	Answering a client who asks who consulted their file	Counting consultations per person as a measure of activity
Reason for access where the file is under enhanced confidentiality	Justifying the access during a client audit	Assessing the quality of the work
Withdrawals and grants of rights	Reconstructing who had access, and when	Producing a ranking

One constant exception, which is not one: whoever signed a deliverable is named. A signature is an act, not a counter — and that is precisely what makes it contestable.

Ready for Friday: the list of the 19 files, the list of the 3 methodologies to keep in the handbook, and the consultation log for those files over the last twelve months.
