Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. The filter flagged a language, not a content. It does not recognise the language and treats the unknown as suspect.

Message	Problematic content?	Reason for the automatic flag
1	No	Language not recognised
2	No	Language not recognised
3	No	Language not recognised
4	No	Language not recognised
5	No	Language not recognised
6	No	Language not recognised
7	No	Language not recognised

> Seven flags, zero real problems. The filter did not misjudge a content: it judged no content at all.

What it produced, and what is never measured

Member	Behaviour after the flag
A	Stopped writing in that language
B	Stopped writing in that language
C	Stopped writing in that language
D	Stopped writing
E	Stopped writing
F	Unchanged
G	Unchanged

> Over-moderation produces no complaint: people leave. The dashboard shows fewer reports and fewer incidents — it looks like an improvement.

What is proposed

Element	Content	What you gain
Human review before any delay	For unrecognised languages	The 7 messages leave the queue without waiting, and the filter keeps the setting you chose
The 7 messages and the language identified	Provided	The moderator opens the right file first time

Widening the filter would let other things through. The trade-off between the two errors — holding an innocent message or letting through one that should not pass — belongs to the community, not to the tool.
