Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. It describes the decisive point of the offer: a client's accounting data is covered by the firm's professional secrecy, and partitioning between files is not a setting but an architecture.

What “no bridge” means technically

Rule	How it is held	What happens if it is attempted
An agent open on one file reaches no other	The scope is set by the file itself when the session opens	The question stays unanswered — there is nothing to read
No data aggregated across files	No cross-file index is ever built	The calculation does not exist
Role-based access	Rights follow the job: a payroll assistant does not open a file under tax audit	The opening is refused and logged

Rule	How it is held	What happens if it is attempted
Logging of every consultation	File, staff member, time, document opened	Nothing is invisible, attempts included
Encryption in transit and at rest	On the firm's machine as on the isolated resource	—

The real case: a question that calls for another file

Step	What the agent does
1. What blocks it	The content of a client's file belongs to that client. The agent does not stop itself looking: there is nothing to see.
2. The lawful route, already taken	The firm's internal doctrine, applicable across every file, and the scales published by the tax authorities, quoted with their publication date. The note is drafted and ready to sign.
3. What stays off the route	Taking a figure out of another file, even aggregated, even anonymised. The firm looks after 9 construction companies: an average over 9 is de-anonymised with two subtractions.

The client walks away with an answer. That is the test: a rule that leaves the user empty-handed is not a rule well applied, it is unfinished work.

The consultation log, over the quarter

Measure	Value	What it proves
File consultations logged	4,812	Every opening is timestamped and named
Access to a file outside the staff member's remit	0	Partitioning is verifiable, not declared
Files under tax audit, restricted access	6	Systematic routing through the quality partner

Measure	Value	What it proves
Time to reconstruct the log	immediate	Against 3 days of manual searching

> This log is a selling point for the firm, not merely an obligation. It is the document asked for by a client entrusting the accounts of a business sale, a distressed file or a sensitive transaction — and few firms this size can produce it in a minute.
