Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. They write in a language that is not theirs, often because they assume we do not speak theirs.

Finding	Value
Customers writing in English although Spanish is served	48
Turns before resolution, in a second language	5.2
Turns before resolution, average	3.8
Gap	+36%
Accepting to continue in Spanish	31
Turns before resolution after switching	3.9

In a second language, people describe a problem less well, understand an answer less precisely, and give up sooner.

Why three languages make the assumption more common

A customer who does not see their language announced concludes it does not exist. The three languages served are therefore announced in the very first message, in all three — the only way to remove the assumption at source.

What the agent does, and does not

Action	Done?
Announce the three languages served at entry	Yes
Offer, once, without pressing	Yes
Switch language unprompted	No
Infer the language from nationality	Never
Infer the language from the delivery country	Never
Infer the language from the name	Never

Having a language imposed is unpleasant precisely for the people it is meant to accommodate.

Retention

The preference holds for the duration of the exchange, no longer: it does not have to become a permanent attribute of a file.

connected; the events logged, their content, their retention period and who may access them are defined for the deployment chosen.
