Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. Monitoring says what comes from outside; the document base says what the company wrote. The two answer each other, and each stays on its own source: the monitoring agent never cites an internal document as though it were a publication, and vice versa.

What the memory holds

Data kept	Volume or nature	What it is for
Items kept	1,412 over 3 years	Including the first twelve months carried over from the old spreadsheet
Source and publication date	On every item	Going back to the origin before acting
Collection date	On every item	Telling apart when it appeared and when it was seen
Scope and recipient	On every item	Knowing who knew what, and when

Data kept	Volume or nature	What it is for
Discard reasons	On every discarded publication	They say why a subject never came through — more useful than one would think

An example query

Question asked	Answer returned	What is most useful
"What had we seen about degreaser contact time?"	6 occurrences, from March last year to this month, with links and recipients	That the first goes back sixteen months
"Has our labelling procedure been reviewed since the last text?"	Monitoring + document base, each cited for what it is	The question needs both sources, and they are not interchangeable

The time this replaces

Before	After
Half a day when it was possible at all — most often no answer	34 questions asked this quarter, all answered in under a minute

What is proposed: a subject sheet generated on demand — everything seen on a theme, in order, with the sources. On degreasers it runs to two pages and became the basis of the board paper.
