Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. The first flag will not be fixed by an update: a released permission is on everybody's device.

#	Flag	What triggered it	At stake	Recipient	Chase
1	3 unused permissions	Manifest and call analysis	What the user sees	Before submission	Before submission
2	Send before the first screen	Start-up network trace	Consent	Whoever decides + data lead	Immediate
3	41% on a version over 4 months old	Store breakdown	Compatibility	Whoever decides on updates	Monthly
4	Fix installed by 62%	Same	38% without the fix	Same	Monthly

The six guarantees that protect your app in production

The guarantee	What you gain
Submitting to a store stays your decision	The build is made, tested and ready to go: there is no rollback on a store, there is a next version — yours ships when you decide
A permission leaves the manifest only after checking	The three permissions declared and never called are flagged to you, with the library that brings them: you clean up without breaking the loading
Disabling a third-party component stays yours	Some stop working entirely: you decide with the impact in front of you, not after the crash
Crashes are worked on without opening a named report	A named report contains the user's screen contents: you fix on the technical traces, and your tooling puts none of your users at risk
A crash is reproduced before it is fixed	A fix laid on an unreproduced crash passes the tests and fixes nothing: the fix installed by 62% of your users is a real one
Answering a store rejection stays yours	The reason for the rejection is decoded and the corrected build is ready: you hold the commercial discussion with the fix already in hand
