Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. All four flags concern the base, none the people querying it.

#	Flag	What triggered it	At stake	Recipient	Chase
1	7 contradictory document pairs	Same question, two answers	61 answers served	Both authors, together	7 d
2	41 documents with no author	Metadata	612 answers underpinned	Base owner	Monthly
3	1 document from 2019, most consulted	Answer log	340 answers	Its author, once a year	Annual
4	214 documents never served	12-month log	Information	Nobody	—

> The fourth flag goes to nobody. A document never served is not a problem: it may cover a rare and serious case, and that is exactly the one needed one day.

What makes an answer from the base dependable

What the agent holds	What you gain
Two contradictory sources are shown side by side, dated	You see that a point is unsettled instead of discovering it on a live case; a smoothed answer would have hidden it
The source chosen is chosen on the date of its content	A document re-uploaded yesterday does not override the version in force: a file date is not a content date
A document never served is flagged, not removed	It may cover a rare and serious case — exactly the one needed one day; removal, by contrast, is signed
The author shown is the one who answers for the document	Whoever uploads is not whoever answers: you know who to put the remaining question to
Every answer carries its source, rather than a confidence percentage	A "78%" gives permission to accept; a source gives the means to check
An undated document is raised as such, with its author	A manufactured date would be indistinguishable from a real one, and would turn against you the day it matters
