Fictional document

Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. No single change is big enough to be refused, and the sum is.

| Item                                        | Kept? | What it allows                  |
|---------------------------------------------|-------|---------------------------------|
| Page weight over time                       | Yes   | Seeing the drift                |
| Outgoing calls introduced and by what       | Yes   | Knowing what leaves the browser |
| Dependencies and the share actually used    | Yes   | Spotting 340 KB for 11 lines    |
| Accessibility fixes and their date          | Yes   | Evidencing the rework           |
| Framework comparisons and their criteria    | Yes   | Reproducing the reasoning       |
| Anything measuring those who build the site | No    | —                               |

The weight drift

| Finding                         | Value  |
|---------------------------------|--------|
| Home page weight six months ago | 180 KB |
| Today                           | 1.2 MB |
| Changes that touched it         | 61     |
| Weight added by the heaviest    | 90 KB  |

Weight is now measured at every change, with the delta.

The textbook case

| Finding                       | Value  |
|-------------------------------|--------|
| Library added to format dates | 340 KB |
| Lines used                    | 11     |

What the agent publishes against itself

| Finding                                                        | Value |
|----------------------------------------------------------------|-------|
| Images produced by the agent with no alt text, before the rule | 41    |

It is the most ordinary defect of any generated code, and it is invisible unless somebody counts it.

The two steps that go through you

| Step         | What your review guarantees                                                                   |
|--------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Merging code | Human review remains the rule: what enters your repository has been read by somebody of yours |
| Deploying    | A live page is read by your visitors: it only goes live once you agree                        |
