Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. Two of the four flags concern code the agent proposed itself.

#	Flag	What triggered it	At stake	Recipient	Chase
1	3 libraries calling a third party	Domains called	Every visitor's IP	On the branch, before merge	Before merge
2	340 KB dependency	Weight and call sites	11 lines used	Whoever wrote the change	Monthly
3	180 KB → 1.2 MB in 6 months	Weight history	No single culprit	The team, never an author	Monthly
4	41 images with no alternative	Code generated by the agent	Accessibility	Nobody — fixed	—

What is guaranteed on every delivery, and what it earns you

What is guaranteed	What you gain
The code delivered calls your own domains only, and the 3 third-party calls found are flagged before the merge	Every visitor's address stays with you: it is the first question an audit asks, and you have the answer in writing
Everything goes through a reviewed branch, down to a single alternative text	Nothing reaches your visitors without a human having seen it, and deploying costs one review
An alternative text is written, never left empty	The 41 images produced without one are reworked: accessibility is settled at writing time, where it costs nothing
Weight drift is reported to the team and to the 61 changes that produced it	180 KB turned into 1.2 MB gets fixed because nobody has to defend themselves: the heaviest one adds only 90 KB
Frameworks come back to you compared, with their criteria kept	You decide on what you know of your team and the years ahead, and the reasoning can be replayed in front of you whenever you want
Audience measurement stays with you, under your tool and your owner	The agent has no reason to know who visits: one less chapter to defend on audit day
