Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. Unclaimed entitlement is the gap between the people entitled to cover and those who obtain it: here it almost always comes from a report never having been made. The agent reclassifies nothing: it matches and hands the file over.

The three matches

| Situation spotted                                                                                      | What is compared                                                   |

The trial, and what it gave

| Stage                                  | Volume                                   |
|----------------------------------------|------------------------------------------|
| Letters sent                           | 60                                       |
| Insured people who made contact | 41                                |
| Reports regularised             | 34                                |
| Cases recognised by officers    | 27                                |
| Situations left to handle              | 154, in three waves a month apart |

The measure works both ways: those 27 files belong to occupational risks and not to health insurance. With the link restored, each is charged where it belongs — what the accounting officer and the supervising authority expect of a handling service.

The files arrive pre-assessed — 4 minutes 30 instead of 27 —, which allows about thirty regularisations a month to be absorbed without reinforcement.
