Fictional document

> Fictional document — demonstration example
> This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

> Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. The organisation, the files, the people and the figures are invented. None of the ways of doing it was applied before the client chose.

The completeness rule attaches a document to the file where it is filed. It does not say whether it counts as filed for a second file opened in the same person's name: that is the point that had not yet been defined.

The ways of doing it, put to the client

Way of doing it	What it brings	What it costs	Outcome
Attach to both files and say nothing	The reminder on the second falls away by itself	The person does not know a document served the other file	Set aside by the office

Way of doing it	What it brings	What it costs	Outcome
Send the reminder on the second file anyway	Each file stays watertight	A request for a document already provided	Set aside by the office
Attach to both and write to the person	The reminder falls away, and the person knows which document served what	One more message	Recommended, then approved

How often the case arises

Period	Documents valid for two files	Of which followed by a reminder on the second
Last twelve months	412	168
Of which the past quarter	104	41

The figure is what turns a one-off decision into a rule: 168 reminders sent for a document already filed are worth an entry in the completeness rule, and the office decides it knowing the volume.
