Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. A contributor's reply waited 11 days for first handling; it is sorted, reclassified and handed over the day it arrives.

The month's sorting

Nature	Volume	What is prepared
Disputes over the amount	168	The two columns side by side: what the contributor counts, what the account carries, and the exact line where the two diverge
of which divergences coming from the body	39	Corrections prepared, ready to be entered by an authorised caseworker
Requests for time to pay that do not say their name	121	Reclassified and pre-assessed, instalment plan included

Nature	Volume	What is prepared
Accounts of a situation	84	Account position, three years of history, ten-line summary — to the support unit
Payment promises announced	39	Follow-up set for the date announced: a missing payment is known the next day
Total	412	0 left unattended beyond 48 hours

The 121 unnamed requests are the biggest pocket of unclaimed entitlement in a collection service: a contributor does not have to know the name of the procedure to be entitled to it. “I cannot pay this month” is a request for time to pay — it is handled as such.

What reclassification changes, for the contributor

Measure	Before	With the agent
First handling of a reply	11 days	The day it arrives
Proposed instalment plan after an unnamed request	None — the letter stayed a letter	3 days

> Of the 168 disputes, 39 were well founded. Recognising them quickly is what distinguishes a service that collects from a service that digs in — and the 39 corrections are ready, to be entered by an authorised officer.

To be settled by the service

Automatic reclassification of unnamed requests for time to pay (yes / no): _____
