Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. This summary contains no conclusion, no assessment and no recommendation. A summary that concludes substitutes itself for the review it is meant to prepare: it cuts the reading time, not the number of things to look at.

The five sections, in this order

Section	Content	What never appears
1 — Inventory of documents	Numbered, origin, date	—
2 — Chronology of documents received	What arrived, when, from whom	No interpretation
3 — Dates settled by the registry	Copied across with the document reference	No calculated date

Section	Content	What never appears
4 — Points to verify	Recounted divergences, absent documents, cross-references with no destination	No conclusion
5 — What is missing	And who to request it from	—

The pointer to the document — what makes the summary checkable

Property	Effect
Every entry links through to the image of the document	An officer who doubts a line sees the document in two seconds
The original stays beside it	The summary never becomes a second-hand source
Wording copied, never reworded	No drift of meaning between document and summary

> What the agent writes is never a source: it is a reading. A summary cited as a source in another document would lose the trail back to the original — which is exactly what the systematic pointer prevents.

What the summary shifts

Item	Before	After	Page benchmark
Summarising a case file for review	48 minutes	12 minutes	40 % → 10 %
Across 70 summaries a month	56 hours	14 hours	42 hours returned

What is proposed

Action	Benefit
