Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. The first flag chases at four hours, against twenty-four for the next two and seven days for the last. The difference is not a ranking of severity: it is a ranking of reversibility.

#	Flag	What triggered it	State	Recipient	Chase
1	API key in history	Commit of 01/08 at 16:42	Key still valid	Technical lead + author, only	4 h
2	Vulnerable dependency in production	Fixed version released 15/07	23 days	Service maintainer	24 h
3	Partner TLS certificate	Expires in 12 days	12 days	On call	24 h
4	Restores not tested	Last test 8 months ago	—	Technical lead	7 days

> The first flag goes to two people only. An exposed secret circulated in a team channel is exposed a second time, to more people — and that time by us.

Flag 4 — why it is here

The backups run every day and none has failed. What has not been checked for eight months is that they restore. A backup never restored is not a backup: it is a file.

Proposed chases

Flag	Without action	Then
1	Reminder at 4 h	Engineering management at 8 h
2 and 3	Reminder at 24 h	Engineering management at 48 h
4	Reminder at 7 days	Monthly report
All	—	Weekly summary, by subject

The summary is sorted by subject and never by commit author. A list by name on exposed secrets would turn a safety net into a case file, and the first effect would be that reports dry up.
