Fictional document

Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. The separation between drafting and substance is what counts: a raw list of eleven differences costs an hour spent working out which matter.

The three substantive differences

Article	Your version	Supplier version	Quantified effect
7.1 — Liability cap	The contract value	Six months' billing	€84,000 → €42,000
12.3 — Termination for breach	30 days	60 days	Period doubled
4 bis — Exclusivity	Absent	Introduced	New obligation

The agent does not say which version is better. A cap at six months' billing may be more or less favourable, depending on the contract value and its term — both amounts are given, the conclusion is not.

The eight drafting differences

Nature	Count
Rewordings with no effect	4
Renumbering	2
Corrected internal cross-references	2

What the covering email said

"Please find our version with a few formatting adjustments."

An exclusivity clause is not a formatting adjustment, and it was not announced. That finding is factual: the agent compares what the email says with what the document contains, without characterising the intent.
