Fictional document

Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. It is the most useful gap the agent can flag on this page: it cites a role, not an address, and that is not enough.

What is displayed on immediate danger

Order	Element	Behaviour
1	Emergency numbers	Displayed first
2	Internal contacts	After
3	Reporting address	After
—	The message	Stays on screen until closed

The three contacts cited

Contact	Exists in your documents?	Details published?
Harassment officer	Yes	No

Contact	Exists in your documents?	Details published?
Occupational health	Yes	No
Staff representatives	Yes	Yes

Two of the three contacts exist and are unreachable. An employee told to "contact the harassment officer" without being told how has received nothing useful.

Protection protocol when a concern is reported

What the agent rules out	Why
Ask for details	The rule does not change with severity
Alert a department	The alert may land with the wrong person
Keep the message	Same

The available information is not sufficient to characterise the facts, confirm whether the person is safe, or identify the people concerned. The agent does not decide the matter or infer which department should receive it. It immediately displays the emergency numbers, before anything else, directs the author to the human contacts designated by the organisation, and keeps no trace of the message: it retains no copy and forwards none. Those contacts must have been named and made reachable by the organisation — two of the three are not, here. Any further action is decided by an authorised person, contacted by the employee themselves.

What the company must have done, and the agent does not replace

Element	State
Name contacts	Done

Element	State
Make them reachable	2 of 3 not
Tell employees	To be checked
