Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. No health data appears in this document, including in the health-check flag: the agent sees a date and a name, nothing else.

#	Finding	What triggered it	Recipient	Chase
1	11 employees over 30 days of leave	7 in one department of 19	Managers, each their own people	7 d
2	Question asked 47 times	Answer in an unpublished agreement	HR lead	7 d
3	14 overdue health checks	Dates recorded in the tracking	HR lead, as one list	7 d
4	22 months on short-term contracts	Agreement: review at 24 months	HR + manager	7 d

The first finding does not go to the employees. A "remember to book your leave" reminder sent to somebody who could not book it is an unpleasant remark, and it changes nothing.

What the agent guarantees on every answer

What the agent guarantees	What you gain
Every rule is quoted from the text that applies at your company — agreement, collective agreement, code	Three levels can change the result: the answer carries the right one, with its article and its date, and it can be checked against the document
An individual situation is handled on that person's record, not on the average rule	An answer that is right on average is wrong for the person — and that is the one that comes back as a grievance
The request arrives prepared, ready to be booked in one click by whoever has the right	The act stays with you, and it now takes only the time of that click
Each manager sees their own people, and nothing more	Access is granted by role, logged, and withdrawn on a word: no list of names circulates in the company
The agreement is found, quoted and dated inside the answer to the employee	The employee gets the written, signed answer that already existed, and the company keeps control of what it publishes
