Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. Announcing and interpreting a test result is a medical act, reserved to health professionals; performing it without holding the title is a criminal offence. This is not a design precaution: it is the only genuine prohibition encountered in this scope — and it comes with the route that gives the service user the same service.

What the agent does, and where the doctor takes over

Step	Who does it	Time
Reading the result as it arrives in secure messaging	AI agent — 7 days a week, Saturday morning included	Immediate
Comparison against limits set by the department's doctors	AI agent — it compares, it does not judge	Immediate
Alert to the doctor, file already open	AI agent	41 minutes on average

Step	Who does it	Time
Calling the service user and announcing the result	Doctor, exclusively	—
Letter to the family doctor prepared in parallel	AI agent, doctor's sign-off	Same day

What the alert carries, and why it saves the doctor time

Item attached	What it saves the doctor
The last consultation and its conclusion	Reopening and rereading the record
Current treatment	The first reflex before any call
Previous results, for comparison	Judging an isolated value
The service user's number, ready to dial	The search that pushes the call to later

The figure: a critical result was seen by a doctor in 2.3 days — the time it took to climb the office's pile. It is now seen in 41 minutes. Over the quarter, 6 service users were called back the same day where they would have been called two or three days later.

> It is not the agent that announces: it is the doctor, sooner. And that is what the service user wanted — not to be told by a machine, but to be told quickly. Over the quarter: 118 alerts, 118 taken up by a doctor, 0 service users informed by the AI agent.
