Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. When a question is asked three hundred times despite accurate documentation, the documentation is not the problem.

| Finding | Value |
|---|---|
| Questions on the same subject | 312 |
| Using the word "save" | 287 |
| The button's actual label | "Confirm" |
| Places where the documentation says it correctly | 3 |

Why the agent aims at the screen, and what it earns you

| Easy answer | What it would give | What the agent raises instead |
|---|---|---|

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Add a page | The 312 questions keep coming, and the trap becomes permanent | The replacement label, to whoever designs the screen: 26 support hours a quarter, rounded down |
| Add a callout | Same — the documentation is already correct in three places | Same: the fix happens at the source, in one word |
| Add a tooltip | Same — it is read after the hesitation, not before | Same |

> It is the easiest answer, because it asks nothing of anybody else. It settles the question statistics and leaves the trap in place.

Who the flag goes to

| Recipient | Receives? | Why |
|---|---|---|
| Whoever designs the screen | Yes | The label is theirs |
| Whoever writes the documentation | No | Their page is right |

What the agent answers meanwhile

"The save button is called 'Confirm'." — an answer that treats the symptom, and the agent says so.
