Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. The first flag concerns answers the agent gave itself.

| # | Flag | What triggered it | At stake | Recipient | Chase |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | 41 answers on out-of-date docs | Page / release dates | Right per the docs | Whoever wrote the page | Monthly |
| 2 | 312 times the same question | Grouping by subject | A badly named button | Whoever designs the screen | Monthly |
| 3 | 7 pages on removed features | Release log | 148 views | Whoever wrote the page | 7 d |
| 4 | "Save" against "Confirm" | Screen labels | 8 months apart | Both authors, together | Monthly |

> The second flag does not go to whoever writes the documentation. That page is right, and its author can do nothing — sending it there would ask a fix from somebody who does not have the problem.

What stays with your teams — and the work the agent hands them already done

| What stays your decision | What the agent hands you to decide with |
|---|---|
| Modifying a documentation page | The correction is written, the passage pinpointed, the page named; it goes to its author and follows your approval process |
| Documenting an interface trap | A page documenting a trap makes it permanent: the agent raises the trap with whoever designs the screen, quantified in questions received |
| Unpublishing a page | The note "feature removed on [date]", written in three lines: the user who bookmarked it understands, instead of hitting an error |
| Calling a defect a bug | The symptom, its volume and the version involved, laid out; the qualification and the deadline stay with whoever owns them, and bind only them |
| Saying "that is normal" | The agent says it with its source, or raises the question instead: with no source, a defect turns into a feature |
| Publishing a page written by the agent | The full draft, written from the questions actually asked; publication stays signed, because documentation binds the company |
