Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. This table does not conclude that a code is wrong. It lists description changes that triggered no check — which is information, not an accusation.

Period	Items whose description changed	Check made	No check
Q3 2025	4	3	1
Q4 2025	5	2	3
Q1 2026	3	2	1
Q2 2026	5	1	4
Total	17	8	9

Nine description changes went through without a code confirmation. None has caused difficulty to date; that says nothing about the next ones, which is why the flag now covers all seventeen in advance.

Why the check is hard to do by hand

Element	Finding
Where the description appears	The customer's commercial invoice, not your system
Who reads it	The declarant, line by line, at entry time
What they compare	Today's invoice
What they do not compare	The invoice of earlier shipments

The check is not skipped through carelessness: it requires comparing two documents nobody has side by side. That is exactly what an automatic match does well, and what a busy declarant cannot do.

What would be flagged, on your approval

Trigger	Action	When	The guarantee that comes with it
Item description differs from the last shipment	Flagged to the declarant	Before the entry	No code proposed
New item with no history	Flagged to the declarant	Before the entry	No code proposed
