Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for the demonstration. Unitholder, transactions, records and roles are invented. Nothing is written into any real system, and this draft has been handed to no one but the designated reporting officer. It is plainly marked as a draft on every page: it is the reporting officer's review, completion and signature that turn it into a report.

Nature of the document: DRAFT — handed in person to the designated reporting officer; not transmitted, not filed

Why the signature belongs to a named person

Under article L. 561-15 of the French Monetary and Financial Code, the obligation to report falls on the persons listed in article L. 561-2 — regulated persons. Article R. 561-23 adds that the person authorised to report, the reporting officer, is identified by name to the competent unit and to the supervisory authority, and that any change is notified to them without delay. It is that name, known to the administration, which makes the report stand: the file can be ready on the day of the alert, but the signature remains the act that commits.

On the markets side: two channels depending on the entity

For suspicious orders and transactions, the regime comes under Regulation (EU) No 596/2014 and transmission goes through the AMF's channels. The AMF page on suspicious transactions, updated on 5 February 2026 and consulted on 7 September 2026, describes two routes depending on the entity: the ROSA extranet for French investment firms and portfolio management companies, Sesterce for other entities. Gestion Vaubécourt is in the first. Writing a single channel would have been simpler and wrong for part of the readership.

Confidentiality: The existence of a draft report is known only to authorised people; article L. 574-1 of the French Monetary and Financial Code attaches a criminal penalty to breaching that confidentiality

External writes: 0 — no channel opened, nothing sent, nothing filed
