Fictional document — demonstration example

This document is produced by the Blue Lemon Agent website to illustrate what an AI agent hands to its users. The companies, matters, amounts and people in it are invented. It has no legal, accounting or commercial value.

Fictional document, produced for demonstration. The second flag is given as a count only: no sender, no subject, no reason.

#	Flag	What triggered it	At stake	Recipient	Chase
1	22 threads with no reply	Last message received	4 beyond 3 weeks	Whoever opened it last	5 d then weekly
2	41 personal messages	Sender and subject	None was opened	As a count, to nobody	—
3	312 messages never opened	Opening log	61 carry a question	Mailbox owner	Weekly
4	610 drafts edited of 890	Edit log	Draft quality	Nobody — the agent fixes it	—

> The fourth flag goes to nobody: the agent corrects itself. Reporting its own defects to a manager would move the work without improving anything.

The six guarantees that make the mailbox usable — and what they earn you

The guarantee	What you gain
Sending stays under your control	Without a mandate, the draft is ready and sourced: all that is left to you is reading it back and sending it, and your customer receives a reply signed with a person's name. With a written sending mandate — category, scope, ceiling, duration — the agent sends that category by itself, traced, and you withdraw it with a word
Only the service mailbox is opened	Personal mailboxes stay untouched: you roll out without negotiating access with every employee, and those who write to them have nothing to fear
A personal message is recognised, not opened	It comes back to you as a count: recognising it is enough to leave it alone, and your service mailbox stays a service mailbox
Nothing is buried	Sorting follows your written rules, priority included: the agent raises, and the message nobody had seen comes back in front of whoever can answer it
A commitment is read back and signed	The draft quotes your rate card and your written terms: you approve a price or a lead time already drafted instead of writing it yourself
The counters bear on reasons and delays, not on people	You steer the mailbox without provoking fast, empty replies — those are the ones that cost you a customer
